

Biography

Jolion McGreevy, MD, MBE, MPH

Dr. McGreevy is an emergency physician and clinical ethicist. He is the medical director of the emergency department at The Mount Sinai Hospital in New York, Assistant Professor of Emergency Medicine at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai, and teaching faculty in the Center for Bioethics at Harvard Medical School. He earned his medical degree from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, PA; his Master of Bioethics degree from University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; and his Master of Public Health degree from Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland. He completed his emergency medicine residency training at Boston Medical Center. He has published articles and textbook chapters on emergency medicine and clinical ethics and lectured nationally and internationally.